E-Waste show not a waste!

Last night, the band E-Waste performed at Club One. The music was fantastic, but the best part of the night was a surprise look at the group's new video. E<sub>1</sub>, so everyone was amazed when it suddenly appeared on the big screen behind the musicians. Everyone in the audience loved the video – F<sub>2</sub>, and they were really enthusiastic.

The lead singer, Shad, has a great voice, but sometimes it was hard to hear her. Unfortunately, this happened when the band performed their new song, "All Those Old Cell Phones." This annoyed me a little because I think the words of the song are a little weird and hard to understand. A<sub>3</sub>, and they didn't get upset because they couldn't hear the words. The song is an odd mix of techno, folk, and hip-hop. C<sub>4</sub>, but maybe the new video will help make it more popular.

Before they became famous, D<sub>5</sub>, and they chose their name to make people think about the impact that our old computers, cell phones, and MP3 players can have on the environment. Shad says, "A lot of us buy new electronic stuff every year or so. B<sub>6</sub>? If we don't recycle it, it just goes to the landfill. It's our responsibility to take care of the environment."
